

CANNABIS AND DRIVING DON'T MIX

Smoking or consuming cannabis while, or before, driving is illegal – and not worth the risk to your safety and others.

How does cannabis influence my driving?

- It can slow reaction time, coordination, and decrease your ability to concentrate and make decisions.
- You may have reduced awareness of time and distance as well as difficulty staying in your lane.

Can I get a DUI?

Yes. Driving under the influence of cannabis is illegal, even if you have a medical card.

What else do I need to know?

- No matter what you've heard, cannabis doesn't make you laser-focused or a better driver.
- Being even a little high behind the wheel can affect coordination and delay split-second decisions, putting you and others at risk.
- Intoxicating effects can last for longer than you think – wait at least 6 hours to drive – and keep in mind that effects from edibles can be delayed several hours or more.

It's not just you on the road. If you choose to consume, stay home or plan a safe and sober ride. Let's keep Maryland roads safe!
